Does Fade In have a "Track Changes" feature?

Fade In is, like other professional screenwriting software, designed to produce output with industry standard markup for revisions, indicating changes between drafts through page colors, markers for changed lines/sections, etc.

Normally you will turn on revisions by setting the current revision level under Production > Revisions. The default revision level is white pages, i.e., no revisions. Setting the revision level to a higher level/color will result in revisions being marked with the selected mark in the margin (by default an asterisk, "*").

You can also use Document > Compare to Previous to create a separate document showing differences between two documents by highlighting additions and deletions.
