human beings are way better at than computers. For now.)

There's also no requirement that PDF store the word "fox" as "fox". It could store it as "D&!" or almost anything else, as long as it also stores the — sometimes byzantine — rules of transliteration.

The greatest obstacle to reliable PDF import is the wide variety of PDF creators and methods of creation which can result in all sorts of variables to be taken into account when trying to extract the content. There may still be a few instances where things don't work perfectly.

In those cases, what you may have to/be able to do is select the text from a PDF viewer and paste it into Fade In. With that method, however, a certain amount of reformatting is almost guaranteed.
